SMALL GAINS IN AVERAGE YEILDS

This is Reason Why Farmers Should
Awake to Necessity of Making a Study of Their Business.

T. A. COLEMAN MAKES ADDRESS

Speaks at Opening Session of Country Life Conference in Indianapolis This Morning.

T. A. Coleman of this city, who has just been appointed assistant state leader to Supt. Christie of the Purdue agricultural extension department to equip counties with county agents, made the chief address at the morning session today of the conference on country life, conducted under the auspices of the Indiana Bankers association, which began in Indianapolis today. His topic was "The Present and Future Needs of Indiana Agriculture."

Recently County Superintendent, C. M. George appointed delegates to the conference from every township, two or three being named from some township. It was thought today that every township in the county would be represented tomorrow. The banks and trust companies in Rushville and many in other parts of the county expected to be represented at some of the sessions. Jesse Shelton, Walker township trustee, and W. R. Martin, trustee of Union township, are the only trustees who reported they would attend. Mr. Coleman said in his speech.

The contemplation of the present needs of Indiana agriculture brings before us so many urgent problems and a review of the great strides that have been achieved during the past few years causes one to hesitate to prophecy as to the future.

However, the present needs will be those of the future until the remedy has been applied.

The consideration of this subject leads one to inquire "Is the Indiana farmer doing his best?" Is he fully equipped for his work? "Does he get the most out of his labor?" To all of these questions we would answer, No. The average man is not doing as well as he knows. The reasons may be varied. He may be handicapped for want of physical strength, he may be restricted because of insufficient capital or it may be just pure laziness.

But the average man who is doing his best under existing conditions, finds himself handicapped for want of a larger fund of technical knowledge of his work.

If his limiting factor is his variety of corn or wheat, he needs to know

TO ERECT MODEL COTTAGE

Connerville Seeks to Aid its Tuberculosis Patients.

A "Burr Model Cottage" for a tubercular patient will be built in a few days and set up for exhibition in some central part of Connerville, where all the populace may examine it. The Fayette county society for the study and prevention of tuberculosis is behind this plan, and will construct and exhibit the cottage as a part of its educational program against the Great White Plague. The funds necessary to build the cottage are only a few dollars, and are already in the hands of members of the society. The same thing is contemplated here by the Rush county society, organized for the same purpose.

HAS NEW FORMULA TO KEEP DUST DOWN

Dr. C. H. Parsons Suggests Solvay
as a Panacea For Summer Evil—Tried in Knightstown.

IS ONLY CHLORIDE OF LIME

Dr. C. H. Parsons, city councilman, believes Rushville people would do well to consider Solvay, a preparation for keeping down the dust, before they order their streets oiled. He says that Solvay has many advantages over oil, chief of which is that it cannot be tracked into the homes. In addition it is cheaper.

Dr. Hollaway of Knightstown has put down a block of the new preparation and the people of Knightstown have postponed oiling to see if Solvay solves the problem. The block cost seven dollars, and to oil would have cost fifteen dollars.

Solvay is pulverized substance which can be thrown on like sawdust. It is granulated chloride of lime and absorbs moisture readily. It is shipped in sealed barrels, but as soon as it is applied, it begins to take up the moisture in the air and gets hard. The moisture enables it to pack so that it furnishes smooth surface for the street. Solvay has been on the market for four years and has been used extensively.

WIL LMEET TOMORROW.

The county commissioners were not in session today, following the initial meeting of the month, but will convene again tomorrow morning, when they will likely consider the petition of the Rushville Retail Merchants association to be allowed to build a bandstand on the court house lawn.

BYRON MAUZY IS VICE-PRESIDENT

Former Rushville Man Second Highest Official in California Society
Which Held Banquet.

TO WELCOME HOOSIERS THERE

Organization is Prparing to Make
San Francisco Seem Like Home
When Exposition Starts.

A dispatch from San Francisco tells of the first annual banquet of the Indiana society in California, of which Byron Mauzy, formerly of this city, is vice-president. Contained with the dispatch in the Indianapolis News is a group picture of the banqueters. The purpose of the organization is to prepare to welcome Hoosier visitors to the Panama-Pacific exposition in 1915.

"But that is only one of the purposes," said Lee M. Olds, president of the new organization, which has recently held its first annual dinner. "It is to make every Hoosier feel at home as soon as he gets there, and to keep track of what is going on back at home."

"Our aim is to make everybody from Indiana comfortable," said Byron Mauzy, vice-president of the Indiana Society, formerly of Rushville, now a piano manufacturer with a sky scraper across from the "social civic center," Union Square, and a job as councilman in San Francisco. "That's why we voted down the recommendation that men should not smoke at the banquets and compromised by abolishing the claw-hammer."

The officers of the organization, just chosen, have offices in one of the best office buildings, the Foxcroft. Lee M. Olds, formerly of Crawfordsville, is president; Byron Mauzy, vice-president; W. H. Coffinberry, treasurer, Directors, in addition to these, are: L. B. Edwards, Paul M. Nippert, Theo. Gaasch, Mrs. H. H. Leonard, C. R. Worrall, Mrs. Nora B. Jordan, Mrs. J. H. Yount and C. S. Hutson, secretary.

The Indiana Society has an enrolled membership of between three hundred and four hundred. Its organization followed the visit of Vice-President Thomas R. Marshall to San Francisco to select the site on which an Indiana building will be erected. Both Mr. and Mrs. Marshall are honorary members, and the formation of the society is said to have originated from a suggestion left by the wife of the Indiana Governor when she was here with her husband.

"At the first preliminary meetings, said C. S. Hutson, "we took up the Indiana Society of Chicago and its methods of entertaining its members, and we decided that we would pattern after that organization in some respects. However, on our directorate since California is a woman's suffrage state, we have half of the members men, the other half women. That will keep us from getting too gay, but need not interfere with our welcome to any Hoosier who comes to San Francisco. In fact, I think it is an improvement on the Chicago organization, because women coming here alone from Indiana can find in the organization friends who can answer questions about shops and things in San Francisco that would puzzle even George Ade if asked him in Chicago."

FIRST EVIDENCE IS INTRODUCED

Malpractice Suit of Carleton Chaney Against Rushville Doctors Begins at Shelbyville.

JURY SELECTED YESTERDAY

Opening Statements Are Made and Hour is Devoted to Reading of Depositions.

The first evidence from the witness stand was introduced today in the Shelby circuit court at Shelbyville in the malpractice suit of Carleton Chaney of near Glenwood against Dr. H. H. Elliott and Dr. J. T. Paxton. Mr. Chaney is demanding $5,000, for the loss of the services of his son.

Most of yesterday was spent in obtaining a jury. It was the middle of the afternoon before the twelve jurors had been selected and then the opening statements were made by both sides. An hour before the close of court yesterday afternoon was devoted to the reading of depositions by the plaintiff.

The case was sent from this county to Shelby county on a change of venue, and many prominent lawyers are engaged in the case. The Shelbyville Democrat adds concerning the start of the suit:

Titsworth & Green of Rushville, and Hord & Adams of this city are appearing for the defendants and Reuben Conner of Connerville; Judge Will M. Sparks of Rushville, and Carter & Morrison and Elmer Bassett of this city are appearing for the plaintiff.

The suit is based on the treatment given Harold E. Chaney, a son of the plaintiff, by the defendants after the boy had suffered in an accident, February 8, 1911. The boy had suffered a broken femur and the defendant physicians were called to reduce the fracture. The injury never healed properly and as a result of the accident the boy's leg is much shorter than it should be and the condition is alleged to have resulted from carelessness and unscientific treatment given.

The jurors selected to try the case are E. V. Kaster, John Garrigan, Fred Cord, Marion Jones, Thomas G. Stoughton, John A. Morris, Elijah V. Kendall, Lawrence Miller, Rudolph Hasler, J. H. Meloy, Joseph Crum and Byron Duffy.

Judge Sparks made the opening statement for the plaintiff and John A. Titsworth made the opening statement for the defendants. He used a femur bone from a human skeleton to illustrate his remarks.

Another suit based on the same accident is pending in the local court and it came here from Rush county on change of venue at the same time as the one now on trial. In it the victim of the accident by his next friend, Carleton Chaney, is suing the same defendants for damages of $15,000 for alleged malpractice. It was really the intention to try it first, but the $5,000 suit was set for trial first through a misunderstanding.

STOCK BEING MOVED.

F. E. Wolcott is moving his drug stock from the room at the corner of Main and Second streets to the Ed Tyner room, a half block north on the east side of Main street. He is making way for an improvement of the building preparatory to the entrance of the Peoples National Bank.

A petition for a drain has been filed in circuit court by Maurice W. Manche et al. The proposed drain is in Ripley township.

MRS. BRUNO IS DIVORCED

Former Rushville Woman in Court at Denver, Colo.

Mrs. Wretha P. Osborne-Beher-Bruno, formerly of this city, has been divorced by her husband, Clarence L. Bruno, in the county court at Denver, Colorado, according to newspaper clippings sent here by a former Rush county man. Bruno charged infidelity and cruelty and Mrs. Bruno filed a cross-complaint, making practically the same charges. The jury found that Bruno had been sinned against more than he had sinned, and a divorce was granted to him. The evidence was heard behind closed doors.

SAY CITY HAS NOT KEPT IT'S CONTRACT

Former Councilmen Declare Rushville Agreed to Furnish Water
For Animal Drinking Fountains

NOW THEY'RE DRY AS A BONE

Stockmen who had been in the habit in years gone by of watering their stock in the drinking fountains for animals at the southwest and northeast corners of the court house are complaining because the fountains are dry. Investigation brings to light the fact that they have been dry for several months. It is argued that the placing of them was a useless expense if they are not used.

Councilmen during Mayor Frazier's administration declare that the city made a contract with the county as regards these fountains. They say that the county paid for the fountains and that the city was to furnish water for them. In return the city was to have a room in the court house free of charge for the use of the city treasurer. It is pointed out that the city has not kept its contract.

TRENNEPOHL CASE ENDS SUDDENLY

Judge Megee Instructs Jury to Find
For the Defendant and Damage Suit is Over.

IS NOT ENOUGH EVIDENCE

The $2500 damage suit of John Trennepohl against John W. Johnson, et al., came to a sudden ending yesterday afternoon in the circuit court. The plaintiff's side of the case had been presented to the jury when the defendant's attorneys moved that the judge instruct the jury to return a verdict for the defendants. Judge Megee sustained the motion and the jury found for the defendant. The evidence introduced showed that the plaintiff had no case. It was brought out that Trennepohl had been warned not to go to that part of the Johnson gravel pit where he was injured in a cave-in. Since the filing of the case Trennepohl has been declared insane and is now in the Madison asylum. The name of Luther Sharp, his guardian was substituted in the complaint.

Mr and Mrs. Charles Sweet have moved from Main street into the old M. E. church parsonage, which was moved to the Stewart & Tompkins addition.

HAS BEARING ON LOCAL CONDITION

State Public Utility Commission to Decide Whether Municipal Plant
May be Repaired.

COMPETITORS FILE PROTEST

They Allege it Would be Sinking Money in a Worn-Out Plant.
Jurisdiction is Questioned.

A case that has a direct bearing on conditions in Rushville is now before the state public utility commission in Indianapolis. The question for settlement is whether the city of Goshen is to be allowed to expend $40,000 on repairs for its lighting plant, in the face of a protest from the Hawks Electric company of Goshen, which desires the commission to refuse to allow the city to attempt to rejuvenate what the Hawks company contends is a "worn out plant."

An array of legal talent appeared before the commission. The question is one of the most important bearing on the commissioner's future policy toward municipally controlled plants, that has come up. The Hawks company's attorneys contended that the only question the commission has to decide was whether the intended expenditure by the city was for the purpose of repairs or for the erection of a new plant. In the latter case, the private company contends, the new public utility act would step in and declare that it was against public policy further to burden the city of Goshen with additional debt.

E. A. Dawson, city attorney of Goshen, spoke first before the commission and contended that the powers of the commission did not contemplate the supervision of replacements and repairs of public utility plants, but extended only to the supervision of proposed new utilities.

"You gentlemen can prevent the birth, but the statute has not given you power to say that you can kill, commit murder, on existing utilities," he said. "The statute has not given you power to say that the city's

Mr. Scorekeeper Give Mr. Kelley a Thousand Per Cent. Please

Please turn to the page, Mr. Scorekeeper, where the record of Mr. John (plain John) Kelley, who has been pastiming here for a few brief years—too brief, in fact—as the governor of the street cleaning boys and credit him with a thousand per cent.

Yes sir! Ask no questions, Mr. Keeper,—meaning, of course, scorekeeper—and do as we say. Mr. Kelley has a perfect batting average and Mr. Kelley is not to be slighted. He did it last night. What? He made only three bases on a long hit that should have been a home run, but we'll have to credit him with a thousand, sire, because he deserves it. Look what he did!

"Well what did he do?" questioned the curious group who stood on the corner, his frame skygoggin' and one eye squinted. "I'll fall for your gutter gags."

What did he do? This man's been standing on the corner all of the manual-laboring hours of his life and doesn't know what Kelley did last night. Why, you boob, he swept Main street last night—that is we should say, he had it done. Our error. Mr. Scorekeeper, but overlook it please.

That part of the cleaning which took place down town was a sort of a dry affair, which caused many of the streetsweeper's best friends to turn their back on it. Even at that, Scorekeeper, as was so well stated fifteen lines back, give him a thousand although he got but three bases on a four base hit.

No More Storage of Grain by Dealers and Millers

In an interview with Grain Dealers and Millers of Rush County, as to the effect of the recent legislation, which provides that Mills, Elevators and Warehouses, that accept grain on deposit or storage, with or without compensation, shall become public storage companies, and fall under the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission, the same as Railroads, Interurban Roads, Telegraph Companies, etc.

Each authorized the statement that they could not afford to comply with the requirements of the law governing public service companies, with its complicated system of bookkeeping, reports, etc., when business itself is unprofitable, hence they can not now longer accept grain on storage without rendering themselves liable to heavy penalties, therefore, to a man, they propose to abandon the practice entirely, and since the practice of loaning money to depositors and others has been indulged in so liberally by some grain dealers, in consequence of the storage of grain and otherwise, it is understood that such as have thus performed the functions of the banker will abandon that practice and no more money will be advanced, loaned or provided for by them, except in payment for grain, seed, etc., as the same is purchased and delivered.

CONTRACT WAS "REASONABLE"

So George F. Hoar Assured Steel Trust Promoters.

THEN THEY WENT RIGHT AHEAD

A New Chapter Relating to the Formation of the United States Steel Corporation, in Which is Revealed the Name of Old Senator From Massachusetts, Comes Out in the Hearing of Government's Suit.

New York, June 3.—Into the suit to dissolve the United States Steel corporation, the name of George F. Hoar, for many years a United States senator from Massachusetts, was brought when there was introduced into the testimony of the defendant company an opinion by the late senator on provisions of the Sherman anti-trust law. Judge E. H. Gary, president of the board of directors of the steel company, testified that this opinion was taken as authority by makers of steel products who pooled their interests for a period of a dozen years after the Sherman law went into effect. The law became effective in 1890 and a year later the senator's opinion was solicited.

The question propounded to Senator Hoar was whether an agreement with each other by several companies, the product of each of whom is manufactured in one state, to be sold and delivered in another state or in a foreign country, by which they stipulate that their product shall not be sold for less than an agreed scale of prices and that each shall pay into the common stock, to be divided, in an agreed proportion, all profits by it received beyond what comes from a specified amount of sales is illegal and expose those participating to the proceedings and penalties provided for in the Sherman law. In the senator's opinion the proposed agreement would not tend to create a monopoly, and the only question before him was whether the agreement outlined was in restraint of trade. "I think the contract above proposed," the senator further held, "is reasonable and would be so held by the courts of the United States. The opinion of the courts, like the opinion of the rest of the community, may vary in different generations as to what is reasonable. I think the parties to the agreement would not be likely to be convicted of an offense under the statute of last year."

After Senator Hoar's opinion had been given, Judge Gary said, arrangements were made which affected prices. The opinion was passed around among the manufacturers and they took advantage of it. The witness said he heard much of pools, but that he knew only one arrangement in regard to standard steel rails. This was made by Andrew Carnegie, Henry C. Frick, H. R. Porter and himself. He said he drew it and that each of them signed, the agreement being that the Illinois Steel company and the Carnegie Steel company should each take 50 per cent of the total output of standard steel rails. Other companies asked to get in and were admitted, their presidents signing the paper which Judge Gary had drawn. This agreement, he said, had been stolen from his desk since the beginning of the present suit. Later, when a formal agreement was arranged, Judge Gary did not enter into it. He said he had begun to change his mind and to incline to the opinion that despite the opinion of Senator Hoar, such arrangements were illegal.

Judge Gary also went into the details of the purchase of the securities of the Tennessee Coal and Iron company by the United States Steel corporation during the panic of 1907. He described financial conditions at that time, saying that Mr. Morgan had thrown himself into the struggle against complete disaster and was holding meetings of financiers day and night. He said Mr. Morgan represented conditions as becoming worse and expressed the opinion that if the steel corporation could take a majority of the securities a general crash would be warded off.

He described the negotiations and said the suggestion was made that President Roosevelt's approval of the deal be secured in order to be safe against any suit that the government might bring. Judge Gary denied emphatically that Mr. Roosevelt had been deceived in any way regarding the necessity for doing something for the Tennessee Coal and Iron company.

WANTS TO ERECT AN ARMOR PLATE PLANT

Representative Barton Earnest In His Proposition.

Washington, June 3.—Request for the appointment of a special committee to investigate and rush a bill to the house providing for the erection of an armor plate plant to be owned and operated by the government was made in a resolution introduced in the house by Representative Barton, Republican, of Nebraska. In presenting his resolution Mr. Barton asserted that he believed its adoption would fall as a blow on the steel trust and that the government would then secure freedom for itself from the exorbitant exactions of the armor plate monopolies. Barton flatly charged that the navy department has recklessly spent enough money to "feed the hungry people of the world" in the past several administrations.

"I would hazard the statement," Barton said, "that the condemned goods in the Washington navy yard, and the other navy yards of the United States, represent enough to feed the hungry people of the world." Hope is now expressed that the monetary bill as well as the tariff bill will become laws before adjournment. It was made plain that few look for an early termination of the session. Speaker Clark predicted that congress would not adjourn until Oct. 1.

Bloomington, Ind., June 3.—Will Williams, alias George Brooks, confessed slayer of W. H. Fielder, is now in jail at Martinsville, to which place he was taken following the spreading of rumors that a mob was likely to be formed and storm the jail to lynch the slayer of the well-known railroad man.

THIEVES STEAL A HUNDRED CHICKENS

Make Successful Escape After Purloining in Abel VanSeyoc Hen Coop Near Gwynneville.

THEY LEAVE NO CLEW BEHIND

Chicken thieves are at work in the vicinity of Gwynneville, one hundred fine chickens have been stolen from Mrs. Abel VanSeyoc, residing three-quarters of a mile northeast of Gwynneville. The chicks ranged in age from two weeks to chickens as large as quails.

The pens are in the orchard a short distance from the house and the thieves had an easy time accomplishing their plans, as they could take the chickens without them making enough noise for Mr. and Mrs. VanSeyoc to hear.

It is not known for sure what time the chickens were stolen, but it is thought the prowlers did their work between ten and eleven o'clock at night. A family dog which was kept at the house awakened the family about ten-thirty o'clock and Mr. VanSeyoc got up to investigate the trouble, but was unable to find anything wrong.

Friday morning when the family arose for the day and Mrs. VanSeyoc went to call the chicks to feed them, to her sorrow, found nearly all of them stolen. The thieves left no clew. This is the first raid chicken thieves have made in that vicinity for some time.

NOT MUCH DOING IN WAY OF LOBBY

Committee's Inquiry Discloses No "Insidious" Influence.

SENATORS SHOW CLEAN BILLS

If the Investigation of the President's Charges That a Numerous and Dangerous Lobby Is Fighting the Tariff Program Is to Be Taken Seriously, the Evidence Must Come at Later Sessions of the Committee.

Washington, June 3.—Without yielding any confirmatory results, the senate investigation into the lobby against the tariff bill, which President Wilson characterized as "numerous, industrious and insidious," has got under way. Fourteen senators of all shades of political opinion were examined in alphabetical order in the course of the first day's proceedings, but not one of them testified to having been subjected to improper or illegal pressure on the part of a lobby. On this point, regardless of party affiliations, all the senators were in agreement. Not one had been "approached" or offered a bribe, not one had been threatened with political extinction, and to none of them had the suggestion been made of political preferment for favorable action or political reprisal for unfavorable votes upon the tariff schedules.

President Wilson, when he gave out his statement charging a lobby was operating against the Underwood bill, made it plain that he did not charge the existence of corruption, but merely the misrepresentation of facts through a persistent campaign and a reckless expenditure of money. Little support was found even for this limited condemnation by the president in the testimony given by some of the Democratic senators, and it is apparent that there will have to be some stronger developments at further sessions of the inquiry if the investigation is to be taken seriously.

NO ANSWER FROM JAPANESE

Washington, June 3.—Viscount Chinda, the Japanese ambassador, called on Secretary of State Bryan and discussed with him the situation with regard to the negotiations over the California alien land laws. The ambassador did not, however, present the reply of his government in reply to the Bryan note of two weeks ago answering the Japanese protest against the California law. The ambassador indicated that he expected to have a communication from his government to present to Mr. Bryan in a few days. It was said by both the ambassador and Mr. Bryan that there was nothing new in the situation as a result of their talk.

Comiskey Wants Cobb.

Chicago, June 3.—The trade that landed Hal Chase for the White Sox in exchange is part of a three-cornered deal which will bring Ty Cobb to Chicago, according to report. It is declared that now that Comiskey has Chase to offer for Cobb, the swap is only a matter of carrying out the details.

USE FOR CONDEMNED MILK.

Government Recommends That It Be Fed to Live Stock.

With the approach of summer, when large quantities of milk are condemned and destroyed in cities throughout the country, the department of agriculture has issued an appeal to health inspectors to denature the condemned product and return it to farms to be fed to live stock.

By this method the department's experts are convinced a considerable saving could be made in the cost of raising beef and pork.

The department advocates the use of rennet, which will transform condemned milk into thick curds. The cost of the rennet is small, being a fraction over 3 cents for a ten gallon can. In connection with the appeal the department gives the results of experiments with rennet, giving the temperatures at which the powder works most quickly and effectively.

A Lobbyist Defined.

The dictionary defines the verb to lobby as an "endeavor to secure the passage of a bill in a legislative body by outside influences." Lobbyists are described as "persons engaged in lobbying with a particular deliberative body;" and, in general, the noun lobbyist means "an ante room, as of a legislative hall." It seems that the sinister impressions aroused by the word depend on circumstances, for nobody would call President Wilson a lobbyist, though he is actively using his influence to shape, from the outside, a tariff revision in Congress, which is constitutionally charged with originating it. The president has also an ante room to a legislative hall, and is personally using it to a greater extent than was done by any predecessor. When the revision is finished the president will have the power to veto it, an authority certainly suggesting that Congress itself should not be vetoed in its making, nor dominated from the outside in any way. Etymologically, lobby is derived from an old Germanic word meaning an arbor. But it does not necessarily imply that somebody is hidden in the shrubbery.

President Wilson is hearing a great and increasing protest against the tariff bill passed by the House, and should give it dispassionate attention. A large majority of the people voted for protection last year. They are not lobbyists, because of the same opinion still. The idea should not be cultivated in the White House that a free trader is a philosophical statesman and a protectionist nothing but a lobbyist. Public hearings on tariff were denied in committee by Democratic senators, but the mails are open, and if the president finds his letters, from Maine to Louisiana, insistent on the subject of protection, he should not dismiss them as merely insidious. The large majority of the American people, who are for protection because they believe it to be a right policy of government and at the basis of proved prosperity, intend to make themselves heard, though few will go to Washington, or be admitted to the ante room of a legislative hall if they went there. But they have a strong desire to get what most of them voted for.

Community Representative.

A newspaper is the only home institution that travels around to distant cities. Buildings and streets cannot be seen unless one visits a place. The newspaper goes as far as the mails.

The home newspaper furnishes a means by which distant people gain an idea of the place where it is published. If a newspaper is newsy and clean typographically, and has liberal advertising, every man from Los Angeles to Eastport who sees it gets an idea that the town is alive.

People have no idea how newspapers circulate away from their home town. Every publisher has a considerable list of subscribers who formerly lived where it was published, or are interested in the place for business reasons. And people send away many papers.

If you want your town to cut a good figure before the world, subscribe to the home paper, and advertise as much as your business will fairly warrant.

The Sons of the Revolution are going to journey over Washington's route from Philadelphia to Cambridge, but if they travel as Washington did, some of them should take along a little witch hazel for sore feet.

The frequent occurrence of drowning accidents during the summer serves to emphasize the need of a thorough understanding of the principles underlying resuscitation, and particularly the fact that success ultimately depends on preventing permanent injury from lack of blood to the brain. Efforts at resuscitation should be used for at least two hours after apparent death says Dr. F. W. Hitchings of Cleveland in a recent number of The Journal of the American Medical Association.

The heart may continue to beat for as long a time as five minutes after cessation of respiration, although it usually stops in two or three minutes. Add to a possible five minutes the seven minutes during which the brain may be completely resuscitated after total cessation of the heart-beat, a possible maximum of twelve minutes of relative death may be undergone with recovery.

President Woodrow Wilson assaulted the lobbyists viciously. Senator Cummins called his hand and demanded in a resolution that an investigation of Wilson's charges be made, and that if necessary, the President should furnish information. The Democratic majority in the senate took all the teeth out of the resolution, indicating that President Wilson was talking through his hat and had to admit it to the Democratic leaders in the senate.

Amusements

The Palace will show a split reel comedy "The Would Be Romeo" and "The First Baby" for the first picture tonight. The other is a "Mutual Weekly." Both are said to be exceptionally good pictures.

The Portola will have a complete change of program tonight. "The Federal Spy" is the title of the first, a two-reel Seig war drama. It is said to be a spectacular picture and features Pauline Gushman. Besides this two reel special "Pathe Weekly, No. 13" will be shown.

The Princess will show a two-reel Vitaphone drama tonight "The Modern Prodigal." Mary Maurice and James Morrison are featured in this drama. It is the story of a good old mother and her wayward son. The production is complete in every detail. Friday night a two-reel Lubin drama "Heroes, one and All" a thrilling fire story will be shown.

The school kids in "The Old School at Hick'ry Holler," the home talent play which will be given by the Young Men's Circle and the Loyal Daughters of the Christian Sunday school Friday evening at the coliseum, are making the chief occupation of their nights the study of readin' and writin' and rithmetic. Common reports put it that a lot of good coal oil is being used up. The school kids have found out, since the rehearsals began, that there are lots of things about spellin' that they didn't know. Hence the study.

GIRL RIVALS MISS KELLER.

Similarly Afflicted, She Speaks Clearly and Uses the Typewriter.

While Helen Keller has overcome many obstacles in her career and accomplished wonderful achievements, Katherine Frick, thirteen years old, who is also deaf and blind, is showing remarkable proficiency in her school work. Katherine is being educated in the Pennsylvania Institution For the Deaf and Dumb in Mount Airy under the direction of Dr. A. L. E. Crouter, the superintendent. Although she was a mute when she entered the institution four years ago, she has been taught to speak and to use Braille and standard typewriters.

In order to improve her articulation as much as possible an hour is devoted each day for teaching vocal utterances to her. Dr. Crouter says the girl's voice is natural and agreeable and that she speaks with greater clearness than Miss Keller.

The child had all her senses until she was five years old, when she became deaf, dumb and blind. For the last four years each successive legislature has appropriated $1,000 for her education and support, but the superintendent says the amount is not sufficient to meet the expenses of teacher, attendant, clothing and other necessities.

SMALL GAINS IS AVERAGE YIELDS

more of the principles of breeding plants and their improvement through selection. If his limiting factor is his cultural methods, he needs to know more of the influence of cultivation upon the soil as it relates to the bacterial and physical condition. If his limiting factor is the fertility of the soil, he needs to know more of the requirements of a fertile soil, of the influences controlling the change of the inert plant food into form which are readily available to the plant life and of the necessary balance which must be maintained between the different food elements which go to make up the menu of the most highly developed farm crops.

He also needs to know how this essential balance may be restored in the most efficient manner and at the least outlay of money.

That this balance should be restored, is acknowledged by all men and their desire to restore it, is evidenced by the large sums of money spent annually for the commercial plant foods.

The failure to accomplish the desired end is forcefully evidenced by the small gains in the general averages of crop yields during the past few years.

Some wit has said "What you don't know, won't hurt you, if you only find out in time."

In Indiana's agriculture with the cry of the consumer at the high cost of living and the reply of the farmer with the appreciating values of farm property, dividends are wanting, the time is now here for us to find out.

In the past, the relatively few who sought to increase their fund of information, have use of the schools of agriculture of our own and sister states, the experiment stations and the U. S. Department of Agriculture, but the number who have been aided and the help they have received has been all too small in proportion to the need. No one has been or is more keenly aware of this than the men who have been working in the agricultural schools and experiment stations.

In the past few years these men have been going out to those who could not or would not, come to them and three classes of men have been met, the one who was ignorant and poor, the well to do or rich who was sufficient unto himself (men of this class usually inherit their farms) and the man who was cognizant of his needs and resources and was availing himself of every bit of agricultural knowledge that had a place in his farm practice.

At this point I would like to say that the man is indeed fortunate who has a sieve that is tuned to screen out the useful information from that which is equally good but which has no place in his curriculum of farm practices.

As we look over the agricultural horizon, the greatest need today is more definite knowledge and a will to put that knowledge into practice on the part of the farmer. In making this statement I want to make myself clear:

The man who is growing corn should have definite information as to the soil, the preparation of the seed bed, the selection of a variety best adapted to his needs, the importance of selecting corn of strong vitality, the best cultural methods under existing conditions, the time and manner of harvesting and the ultimate disposition of the entire crop to the end that the greatest financial returns may be secured and at the same time return all of the crop residue to the land to restore it to its wonted fertility.

I care not where he gets his information, whether through home study, an university course or through the school of experience. The all important fact being that he, having the information, puts it into practice.

The fact that it has been but a few years since the farmer was sufficient unto himself, causes many men to look with skepticism upon any suggestion that co-operation in buying or selling has any place therein.

It is but a few years since the farm crops furnished the entire menu for the family, the farm flocks and crops furnished the raw material from which the farm women wove the cloth and tailored the clothing, and farm labor builded, from timber grown thereon, all farm buildings.

However, in this early building work, co-operative labor had its inception. The only needed argument as to its value lies in the statement that it still prevails.

The question of the cost of marketing the farm crops is engaging the attention of some of our best thinkers today.

The attitude of our national government, in creating a bureau to give its time to a study of the existing conditions with a view to making recommendations, if any are thought feasible, and the recent meeting in Chicago of men from all parts of the United States to discuss the question from all of its angles, are but indicative of the trend of public thought.

The need for some shorter and less expensive route from the producer to the consumer is so apparent as preclude discussion. The fact that some of the brightest minds in the agricultural world are directed towards its solution gives us hope.

Through the same sources the matter of farm credits will be exhaustively studied and its betterment anticipated.

This brings us to a point where we can view the farmer from an angle from which he is not in the habit of viewing himself, that of a business man.

Not long ago, while waiting at a railway station, I asked a chance acquaintance if he was in business. His reply, "No I am just a farmer," was all too indicative of his point of view. Such cases would indeed make us sad if once in a while we did not hear a man say, in reply to the same question: "Sure, I'm a farmer."

The home of a man who is just a farmer reveals evidences on every hand of his point of view. The unattractive appearance of the farmstead, scrub-bred livestock, the neglected fields, in which we find low yielding crops that are put to no particular use, are but a few of the many things that convince him that farming does not pay and that causes his boys and girls to resolve to go to the city at the first opportunity.

Life an oasis in this desert of neglected opportunity, is the farm of the other man. We are attracted by the beautiful lawn surrounding the home, with its artistic placing of the shrubs and trees. The barns and other equipments are so planned to foster the development of the main idea. This idea may mean some phase of market gardening, fruit growing, dairying, breeding or feeding beef cattle or sheep or the breeding of light or heavy harness horses. This equipment is selected and arranged with the thought of efficiency, together with cost of production. All other farm arrangements are planned to surround and contribute to the greater efficiency and value of the major line.

The whole time and attention of this farmer is not given to the production side of his business but the marketing of the farm products receives his careful attention.

Should his product be apples, care is taken, not to put the small ones in the bottom of the barrel, but to separate the various grades so that the best ones are not handicapped and that the small ones may bring their full value.

Should his crop be draft horses, he produces the kind that the market demands and markets them in the pink of condition.

Since the ton gelding is not made during the last hundred day feeding period, but is the result of a careful mating and a constant care from the foaling time until the finished product is offered on the market, there is the widest range for the intellect of the master, or his son.

We doff our hats to the man who makes the picture of the rural views. How much more then, should we bow to the man who makes the view.

With modern invention genius working over time to devise labor saving farm equipment, the old idea of the drudging of farm work is changing.

There is abundant evidence that the farmer of today largely realizes this value in his farm work but many of them are careless about labor saving devices for the home.

Many wives whose husbands use modern mowing machines, still use the old dash churns; whose husbands are riding plows, still strain the milk in crocks; whose husbands use harrow cart, still use the old wash board; whose husbands have a litter carrier, still use the old broom.

With a proper balance between all phases of farm life, there will be developed a higher plane of rural citizenship. The association of the farm boy with the care and management of the herd of calves will awaken in him a desire to accompany them to the market. The fact that they do not bring the top price for the day, will cause him to study with considerable interest the tops, and will send him homeward resolving to beat the other fellow next time. Would that we had more boys who wanted to beat the other fellow!

Success in lesser fields but adds fuel to the flame until we find him attending the great International. Here, while he exhibits a fine bunch of beeves, the award goes to the load sent up by the school of Agriculture. These cattle fed by men whose knowledge of values enabled them to so regulate the feeds and feeding as to make them masters, carry that ripeness that is so pleasing to the trained eye when it carries all the necessary marbling without the sometimes accompanying lumpiness.

Here again our boy, being of the right stuff, says to himself, if those college men have some knowledge that enables them to make better beef than I, I will go down and sit at their feet until I drain their fountain dry.

With all the needs that are apparent in the farm practices, an equal number are lacking in the management of the home, and as our farm boy cheerily bids father and mother good-bye, as he starts on his quest for an agricultural education, he picks up two grips, for sister is going along to delve into the realms of home economics as she and mother have decided that to properly house and feed the folks is at least of equal importance to that of cattle.

With a fuller realization of the values of all the details relating to the production and sale of farm crops, will come the elimination of waste.

As we travel about over our great state, we can but be appalled at the number of acres, which to all intents are unproductive. There are great areas that because of an excess of moisture are practically of no value and through many sections, particularly the southern part of the state there are equal areas, that because of their rolling surface are wholly unfit for cultivation, but would produce an abundance of blue grass on which might be grazed many breeding herds of cattle. Thus could the cry of the men who, living in the corn belt, are searching the ranges for a supply of feeding steers for their feed lots, be answered with a nearness that would bring joy to their hearts when they considered freight rates and shrink.

Thus with our farmers combining the science and the art of farming with a mind trained in the relative commercial values we will have taken a long step on the road which leads to the success that rightfully crowns the man who has lived fully and well.

CHAPTER XIII.

"This house is watched!"

THE entrance of the two weaker members of the confederacy was somewhat tumultuous. Gage burst into the room chattering incoherently like a monkey. He was followed by a thick set, coarse young man, very much the worse for Greenwich village whisky.

Mrs. Martin and Kreiser eyed them coldly, unmoved until Gage managed to sputter out:

"This house is watched!"

"Friedrich!" gasped Mrs. Martin. At the word her constant fears became fulfilled prophecies of evil. But Kreiser's pale gray face remained calm.

"Nonsense!" he said doubtfully. Gage, without waiting for comments, began feverishly opening secret caches and packing his belongings in a suit case. Skidd lurched forward against the table and brought down his fist with a crash that splattered acid about.

"Don't you?" he demanded, drunkenly. "Well, do you believe I'm drunk?" The German's disgusted growl was sufficient answer.

"Well," went on Skidd, "they didn't get me so drunk I couldn't keep my eyes on them."

He dropped into a chair, grumbling defiantly. Mrs. Martin approached him tremulously.

"What is it? What has happened?" "Some one's on to us," snapped Gage without turning his head. Skidd waved his hand for silence and told his story with the exaggerated impressiveness of the importantly drunk. But it was none the less alarming.

"A wise young guy tried to warm up to me in a saloon," he said, while Kreiser and the woman listened closely. "and I couldn't get him drunk. And, believe me, there's something doing when I can't get a man drunk."

"And there's a new newsboy over on the corner. That's darn funny, now, ain't it?" Without the slightest hurry or expression of alarm Kreiser began packing his things away in his hiding places. And Skidd, proud of the impression he had made, continued:

"And what I want to know is, Are they after us or are they after that new skirt you've got in here? Who is she?" he demanded, glaring at Mrs. Martin. "What's she wanted for?"

"She's all right, Skidd," Mrs. Martin assured him, watching Kreiser at his swift and silent work. "She's not wanted for anything. I know all about her."

"Well, what's she so—so mysterious about herself for?" demanded Skidd. "What do you want to keep her shut up in that room for all the time? I may be drunk, but I ain't so drunk I can't be suspicious. I want to see that girl!"

"That is impossible," declared Mrs. Martin firmly. Gage stepped forward and took the drunken man's arm.

"You better go down and hit the hay, Bill," he suggested. Skidd, blinking at him affectionately, instantly turned from his former design.

"D'you think I better, Slimmy?" he inquired. Without answering him Gage pushed him out of the door and returned. Kreiser was grumbling savagely under his breath.

Then Gage declared himself, shifting nervously from one foot to the other as he talked.

"Well, I fly this coop in the mornin'," he declared—"early mornin'! We're nothin' but a pack of deuces. Skidd picked, your pocket picked and a petticoat down in the parlor that you can't get introduced to! Me for Philadelphia!"

Kreiser's lip curled contemptuously. "I would advise then, Mr. Gage," he began, "that you take—"

The door burst open, and Skidd staggered into the room. All three started at the expression of his round face. The drink had died from his eyes. His skin was pink and white and the whole expression was one of utter terror.

"Mrs. Martin," he gasped, "there's a man—there's a man down there!"

Before any of the three could recover the power of speech there was a sound of quick, firm footsteps and a rustle of skirts, and Kayton strode into the room, followed by Miss Mazuret. The detective's eyes were flashing with anger as they rested on Skidd. The others, save Mrs. Martin, he ignored.

"What do you mean by trying to force your way into this young lady's room?" he demanded, advancing threateningly as Skidd retreated before him. "Mrs. Martin, is this the sort of protection to have in your house?"

"Who is he?" demanded Skidd of Kreiser. "How did he get in?"

The German swiftly seized him by the arm in a powerful grip that imposed silence.

"Mr. Skidd, go to your room," ordered Mrs. Martin severely. She rose to the situation instantly and turned to Kayton with a half apologetic manner.

"He's been drinking," she explained. "Who the devil is he?" demanded Skidd, but not with his former belligerence. He was inwardly completely cowed and frightened.

"What business is it of yours?" demanded Mrs. Martin angrily. "Are you running this house? Go to your room!"

Gage took his arm and dragged him reluctantly to the door, Skidd still protesting feebly.

"Of course if he's drunk," said Kayton, after they had gone, "he probably made a mistake in the room. I'm sorry if we disturbed you."

"Not at all," returned the woman politely. "I didn't know you had called. Doctor, will you see if Mr. Skidd is all right?"

"Certainly," said Kreiser, and followed the others down stairs.

"Mrs. Martin, can't you arrange to give her a room near your own?" asked Kayton quickly when they were alone.

Mrs. Martin nervously moistened her lips and spoke with a visible effort.

"Mr. Kayton, I think it would be better if—much better—if you would take Miss Mazuret away. You see for yourself that I can't protect her in a house of this sort. I can't have the responsibility."

Kayton drew nearer and lowered his voice.

"I can't get her away," he said. "This house is being watched."

Unknown to herself Mrs. Martin's hand flew to the collar of her dress.

"What do you mean?" she asked falteringly.

"It has evidently leaked out that she is here," replied Kayton. "They may be reporters; they may be police detectives. Bruce has the whole force searching for her. I can't take her out without betraying my hand, and she can't go alone. Isn't there a back way that you could escape with her to a hotel?"

"It's impossible."

"Mrs. Martin, the men who are watching this house are operatives of the government secret service," said Kayton swiftly, and the woman choked back a cry. "Some one living here has been uttering counterfeit money. I cannot have Miss Mazuret involved in a scandal of that sort. I didn't tell you at once because I didn't want to alarm you unnecessarily."

"My God!" moaned the woman, her hands pressed to her face. Kayton watched her for a moment in a dead silence. Then she made a quick rush for the door, but he barred the way.

"Wait a moment," he said grimly. "I can't permit you to speak to any one in this house or do anything to defeat the law in this matter."

She stared at him, and her lips barely moved as she asked, "Who is it?"

"I am not allowed to tell you."

Her eyes questioned again, but he shook his head.

"I advise you to go with Miss Mazu-

ret. Will you?"

"No!" she gasped defiantly. His jaw clicked, and he stared at her a moment from under narrowed lids.

"Very well, then," said he quietly. "Sit down a minute." Mechanically she obeyed, and he stood opposite, talking to her across the table, his back to the closed door.

"Mrs. Martin, my own men are watching the house. The personal which you answered was a plant." She half started up with an exclamation and then sank back as if crushed.

"I discovered that your husband, Dr. Kreiser, and yourself are engaged with others in a gigantic counterfeiting scheme. Now, Mrs. Martin, I cannot make you any promise of immunity from prosecution, but you know that if you do what is right by assisting the law that fact will be taken into consideration by the prosecuting officers. I may be able to assist you there, but in return you must do something for me."

He paused and waited.

"What?" asked the woman, almost inaudibly.

He leaned toward her and in a low, steady voice:

"I want to know who killed James Argyle!"

The woman sprang to her feet with a half smothered shriek and faced him with wildly staring eyes.

"Why do you ask me that?" she cried. "I don't know! I don't know!"

"I could kill him," he said.

"You're the one person who does know," declared Kayton grimly.

"I don't know anything about it!"

"You do, and you can save yourself by telling!"

Mrs. Martin gripped the table and leaned toward him, her eyes staring into his with the wild glare of a madman.

"I don't care for myself," she cried. "I don't care but for one thing in this world! What are you going to do with Dr. Kreiser? What are you going to do with Dr. Kreiser?"

Her voice rose passionately, but Kayton shook his head.

"I can't do anything for Dr. Kreiser," he replied brusquely.

"You must! You shall!" screamed the woman as the door was flung open and Kreiser himself sprang into the room.

"What's this? What's the matter?" he demanded, looking quickly from one to the other. His wife stabbed at the detective with a rigid forefinger and gulped hard before she could utter a word and her voice was a hoarse rattle.

"This man is Kayton! He has trapped us!"

The next instant the door was shut and locked, and Kreiser advanced into the room, saying softly:

"Quietly, my dear, quietly. He also is in the trap. Now," his mouth set grimly, "what is it?"

Kayton felt a quick thrill of admiration—the respect for courage that a brave man always feels wherever he meets it.

"Dr. Kreiser," he replied almost courteously, "your wife is implicated with you and others in this counterfeiting. I have offered her a chance to save herself if she will tell who committed the Argyle murder. She—"

Not so much as an eyelid flickered in the German's colorless face as he interrupted quietly:

"She knows nothing about it. How should she?"

"She knows everything about it," retorted Kayton.

"Friedrich!" cried his wife frantically. "Can't you do something?"

With the speed and smoothness of a sleight of hand expert in a delicate demonstration the counterfeiter's hand went to his hip pocket.

"I could kill him," he said quietly, as if trying to make up his mind. Kayton, who carried his soft dark hat in his right hand, let it fall to the floor and disclosed a small automatic pistol.

"No!" gasped the woman, seizing her husband's arm.

With a low moan Miss Mazuret, who had shrunk back against the mantel and watched the scene with staring, frightened eyes, sank unconscious on to the old oak bench.

HUERTA'S GOVERNMENT IS BREATHING EASIER

Mexico Has Been Able to Complete Big Loan.

New York, June 3.—The National Railways of Mexico got the ten million it had to have to pay off its maturing notes, and with it Mexico got its $75,000,000 loan. Cables between the bankers in conference here and the bankers in Paris heading the loan negotiations were kept busy in the effort to rush both government and railroad loan through in time to save a very disagreeable situation to the road. The tension which lasted in regard to the railroad loan was ended with the announcement that the company had sold to a New York and European syndicate $27,500,000 2½ per cent second notes. Shortly after this announcement the maturing notes were being paid off at the Union Trust company.

The notes of the National Railways provide for the matured $10,000,000 notes and the $13,000,000 loan due Nov. 15, and for other corporate requirements.

The conclusion of the big Mexican government loan is regarded by friends of Mexico in Wall street as the final establishment of the power and stability of the Huerta administration, despite the absence of recognition by the United States.

KILLED WIFE AND HIMSELF

Frenchman Excited by News That His First Wife Was Not Titanic Victim.

Paris, June 3.—Among the passengers on the Titanic whose name was given as among those lost was Madame Reuy, a native of Bethune. Her husband lamented her loss for a reasonable time and then married another woman. Yesterday Reuy received a letter from his first wife saying that she was very much alive and was on her way back to Bethune. The husband became very much excited and fired four bullets into his second wife, killing her. He then committed suicide rather than face the wife who had been rescued from the Titanic.

Not since the outbreak of the Balkan war has the London stock market been so depressed as it is just now.

GUAYAQUIL, ECUADOR, IS BEING MODERNIZED.

Movement Started to Make City Cleaner and More Beautiful.

Guayaquil, Ecuador, is to be modernized. A progressive movement has been inaugurated to make it a cleaner and more healthful city, and the outlay of large sums of money is expected to completely change its business and commercial life. The mischief making mosquito is to be banished, and the many lessons learned at Panama and in the Madeira Mamore railway country are to be applied to Guayaquil, so that this attractive port will no longer be passed over by traveler or tourist.

Ecuador has many products that the world needs, and the awakening of her chief port, coincident with the opening of the new trade route through Panama, are relied upon in future development.

In 1910 the country sent north $13,638,308 worth of natural products and during the last two years there has been a marked increase over these figures. cacao furnishing the bulk of this commerce, while "buttons"—that is, the ivory nut largely used for such purposes—contributed more than $1,500,000 to the total, and the famous panama hat brings the producers a like amount.

From New York around Cape Horn the distance is 11,470 miles, and the time of passage under ordinary conditions is more than two months. The route via Panama is 2,864 miles, and this distance can be covered probably in eight or ten days.

The Ecuadorian congress authorized the president of the republic to contract a loan of $10,000,000 for the purpose of completing the work of sanitation, water supply and other improvements in Guayaquil.

TAPESTRIES FOR TROUSERS.

Museum Caretaker Used Priceless Works of Art For Repairs.

The museum at Pau, France, is lamenting the loss of some precious Gobelin tapestries presented to it fifty years ago. A government inspector who was checking the inventory of the museum remembered these beautiful tapestries and asked where they were.

After a long search some of the largest pieces were found in a cupboard sewed up in a sack in which the caretaker of the museum kept his cleaning materials.

The man explained that he had no idea that the tapestries were valuable. Where were the rest? he was asked. He hesitated a moment and then replied, "I am sorry, indeed, but my wife used the rest to line the trousers of my little boy and myself." The trousers proved to contain embroideries representing a woodland scene once worth several thousand dollars.

Along the Mexican border they are threatening that if Huerta keeps on shooting and imprisoning American citizens pretty soon no one will be able to recognize him, let alone a government.

IT'S FORCE OF HABIT.

Muncie Press: The Indianapolis "progressive" county chairman explains the miserable showing made by his party at the Indianapolis primary by declaring it was due to corruption and fraud. Does he mean that the members of his party sold their votes to the Republican and Democratic managers? Or does he mean that the "progressive" members of the primary boards selected by the chairman himself, sold the party out? Or in crying "fraud" is the chairman simply responding to force of habit?

MOVING TO SHIRLEY.

The Carthage flouring mill and machinery of Cox & Cox is being moved to Shirley, where the mill will operate in the future. The proprietors are moving to Shirley on account of better railroad facilities. There is a splendid farming community about Shirley and the farmers are pleased on account of having a flour mill and market for their grain at their door.

ADVANCEMENT OF RURAL LIFE

Object of Conference Now in Progress.

ATTRACTS MUCH ATTENTION

Widespread Interest Has Been Created in the Conference on Agriculture and Rural Life Being Held in Indianapolis, Because Indiana Is the First State in the Union to Undertake Unification Movement.

Indianapolis, June 3.—The state conference on agriculture and country life in Indiana, which began here today, has assumed national importance in the widespread attention it has attracted, for Indiana has been the first state in the Union to undertake to unify the forceful organizations which are working for the upbuilding of farm resources and for the advancement of rural life. Although the conference was called by the agricultural committee of the Indiana Bankers' association, which will meet the expenses of the meeting, fourteen other organizations and institutions are represented on the executive committee which has worked out plans for the conference, mapped out the policy and arranged the program for the five sessions.

Not only bankers, but school authorities, teachers, county and township officials, farm club women and ministers are showing marked interest in the conference.

Fifteen Indiana counties have filed formal petitions, each accompanied by a check for $500, asking for the appointment of county farm agents under the vocational law, and in a score or more other counties funds for agents are now being made up.

SERIOUS VILLAGE AFFRAY

Farmer Stabs Merchant and Is Shot by Latter's Kinsman.

Princeton, Ind., June 3.—Thomas Lindsay, fifty years old, a merchant of Giro, this county, was stabbed in the breast and Claud Harvey, a young farmer of near that place, is suffering from gunshot wounds as the result of a fight. Harvey is said to have attacked Lindsay on account of an alleged threat made by the latter to send Harvey's younger brothers to the reform school for assaulting a cripple boy.

After the stabbing it is said that Harvey ran home and procured an ax and was on his way to Lindsay's home when he was met by John Temme, Lindsay's son-in-law, who, after an alleged threat by Harvey, opened fire with a shotgun. Several of the shot struck Harvey, but he was not dangerously wounded.

Lindsay received an ugly wound, but will probably recover. Harvey was arrested on a charge of assault and battery with intent to kill.

FARMER SLASHES A RIVAL

Two Men Laid Claim to Tenancy of the Same Farm.

Petersburg, Ind., June 3.—Frank Anderson, manager of the Grain and Elevator company, was nearly killed at the Peter S. Brenton farm three miles east of here, where Seldon Tucker, a tenant on the farm, attacked him with a knife, cutting his lip to the bone, inflicting a wound over the heart, cutting one thumb off, inflicting deep wounds on arms and head and slashing his throat. Anderson and Tucker both declared they have rented the Brenton farm, one from one part owner and the other from the other part owner. Tucker was living on the farm and Anderson had instituted suit for possession.

Didn't Prevent Arrest.

Brownstown, Ind., June 3.—Alex Hattabaugh, a horse trader, cut his throat on the street, walked home and then was arrested. He had been eluding the sheriffs of Jackson and Washington counties for several days. His condition after the attempt at suicide was not serious, and the sheriff of Washington county took him to Salem to face a charge of chicken stealing.

Boys Were Stealing a Ride.

Veedersburg, Ind., June 3.—Cyril Glover, son of John Glover, deputy sheriff of Fountain county, was killed and Sherman Dove and Marvin Ochiltree were possibly fatally injured when a Clover Leaf freight train, on which they were stealing a ride, was partly wrecked at Mellott.

Boy Killed by His Own Gun.

Laporte, Ind., June 3.—Clarence Thomas, nineteen years old, of Westville, was instantly killed by the discharge of a shotgun, which he had taken from the house to kill a rabbit.

Entire Train Passed Over Her.

BANKING COMMITTEE OPPOSES BRYAN PLAN

Conservative Currency Bill Now Seems Assured.

Washington, June 3.—According to expectations the Democrats of the house in a party caucus ratified the nomination of Representative Carter Glass of Virginia to be chairman of the committee on banking and currency. Mr. Glass favors the passage of a conservative banking and currency bill. He is opposed to the Bryan plan of government guarantee of bank deposits, and will fight any effort that may be made to incorporate in the banking and currency bill any of the legislation recommended by the Pujo money trust committee. Chairman Glass is working in co-operation with President Wilson and other officials on a banking and currency bill, and the belief is general that a measure will be evolved that will be accepted by a majority of the house Democrats. The new committee will get down to work at once, and the expectation is that President Wilson's banking and currency message will be forwarded to congress this week. Present indications are that the banking and currency bill will be passed by the house the first week in July.

Most of the important chairmanships are filled by members who held places in the last congress. For example, Representative Fitzgerald continues at the head of appropriations; Representative Clayton of Alabama, at the head of judiciary; Representative Adamson of Georgia at the head of interstate and foreign commerce; Representative Sparkman of Florida continues as chairman of rivers and harbors; Representative Padgett of Tennessee as chairman of naval affairs, and Representative Hay of Virginia as head of military affairs.

The Colonel Is Satisfied.

New York, June 3.—Colonel Roosevelt reached New York without the 6 cents which he won in Marquette from George A. Newett, who wrote in his paper that the colonel drank too much. Mr. Roosevelt wasn't worrying about the 6 cents—he knew it was coming and he was gratified, immensely gratified at the verdict. He went straight from the station to his office, where he worked all day and refused to see reporters. When he went out to lunch he drank milk.

Three Women Were Designated.

Pittsburg, June 3.—S. L. Heeter, superintendent of Pittsburg public schools, was found guilty of charges of immorality in the report of a committee of six citizens who investigated the school head. Three women were designated in the report.

NO COMMENT ON REPORT IS MADE

Board of Education Hears Walker Township Trustee Tell of County Agent Support.

NO DISCUSSION IS AROUSED

When Jesse Shelton, trustee of Walker township, reported at the regular county board of education meeting yesterday afternoon that he favored the employment of a county agent in Rush county and that he had more than Walker township's share of the five hundred dollars necessary to accompany the petition, no comment was made by the other members of the board. No discussion on the topic was aroused. The board members transacted very little business. They signed the eighth year diplomas.

The board previously has expressed itself opposed to employing a county agent. The board could not stop the employment of such an agent, of course, if the petition of twenty farmers and a deposit of five hundred dollars is presented, but the question was first put before the township trustees because it was thought they would be more directly interested in it.

PRESBYTERIANS TO PLAY CHRISTIANS

Fast Game in Sunday School League Expected Tomorrow Afternoon Working on Schedule.

FOUR TEAMS REPRESENTED

The second game of the Sunday school league will be played tomorrow afternoon at the South Main street grounds between the teams representing the Christian church and the Presbyterian. This game will count as the first official game in the standing of the league. Both teams are out to cop first place at the start of the league season and the game promises to be hard fought. The game will be called at four-fifteen o'clock. One week from tomorrow the Methodists and the Big Flatrock Christian team will play. The Flatrock team was only recently taken into the league and with their coming in it was decided to start the league on an equal basis and not count the game between the Christians and Methodists. The officials of the league will make a schedule this week for the entire season and here after this will be followed. The schedule will be published as soon as complete.

HAS BEARING ON LOCAL CONDITION

plant must go down, without compensation to the people of Goshen. Public policy is all the other way."

The city entered a motion to dismiss the case and the attorneys argued that the commission had no jurisdiction in the premises, but it was a question for the courts to settle, but the commission overruled the motion and assumed jurisdiction.

Frank S. Roby, appearing for the city of Goshen, said the public utility act did not confer on the new commission power to grant injunctions, restraining orders or similar actions. In the petition of the Hawks company, an order restraining the city from proceeding with its contemplated improvements of its property, was asked. It transcribed in the testimony that action for a temporary restraining order in the Elkhart circuit court already had been argued by the Hawks company.

The Hawks petition contends that the city already is heavily in debt and that the additional $40,000 will be an increased burden which the people of the city should not be called on to bear.

The rate of taxation in Goshen now is $3.12 on the dollar, according to the petition of the private company. The city council already has voted to spend the additional money in rejuvenating the plant.

Attorneys for the Hawks company took the position that the commission has inherent police power to regulate such situations, under several sections of the public utility act. They said a new plant could not be built by a municipality or private parties without the consent of the commission, and that therefore the city of Goshen could not expend such a sum as contemplated without the approval of the commission, because, in effect, it meant the building of an entirely new plant.

NO MORE REGISTRY STAMPS

Ordinary Ones May be Used Instead Very Soon.

Postmaster General Burleson has issued an order discontinuing the use of the special 10-cent registry stamp, and providing that no additional registry stamps shall be printed after the present supply shall have been exhausted. Hereafter ordinary postage stamps may be used for the prepayment of registry fees. Postmaster-General Burleson and Secretary of War Garrison have signed a joint order directing that after July 1 the embossed stamped envelopes and single 1-cent postal cards of the United States be valid for postage in the Philippines, when directed to addresses in the United States, and that those of the Philippines be accepted here under similar conditions. Stamps are not included in the order.

RUSHVILLE DID NOT WIN GAME

Decision by Sporting Authority Says Last Run in Duesseldorfer Contest Didn't Count.

LOCALS CLAIMED THE GAME

Third Out Came on Force Play and Carr's Score in Tenth Went For Nothing.

Jack Ryder's Decision.

If the runner at third was forced, the run does not count, as the third out was made on a force play. If the put-out at third was made on a runner who came all the way from first, the run counts, but if it was made on the runner coming from second, the run does not count.

The Rushville-Duesseldorfer game of May 25, which Rushville claims to have been won in the tenth inning, 3 to 2, was not won at all and the game stands a 2 to 2 tie. This is according to the opinion of Jack Ryder, sporting editor of the Cincinnati Enquirer, one of the best base ball authorities in the country.

The game went ten innings and the winning run that Rushville claimed to have made came with two down and the bases full. The Rushville team contended that the winning run was scored before the third out, but there was bound to be a force out with the bases full and in this case the run does not count. It will be recalled that Mattern hit to the short stop and beat the throw to first. On this play Carr scored, but Coombs was on second base and he was forced to take third which he did not do, and thus the third out came on a force out and the run does not count according to Jack Ryder.

The game should have gone at least one more inning, but the umpire decided that Rushville won. His decision is wrong and all bets are off. The Duesseldorfers contested the decision and were right in their contentions. The short stop really caused the controversy. He should have thrown to third base or second base instead of trying to catch the runner at first base. It was the first time a play of this kind ever came up on the local grounds and the fans were equally divided as to which team was right. The controversy was left to Ryder and as his word is about the law in baseball the only thing that can be done is give the locals and the Duesseldorfers credit with playing a tie game.
